Orchestras worked with

All the most important orchestras of the world.

'San Francisco's Michael Tilson Thomas continues to prove himself a Mahler magician with this latest issue in his acclaimed series, recorded from live performances last year. The massive slow movement [Symphony No 4], more than 25 minutes long, is especially rich and rewarding, its honeycomb of variations perfectly paced and subtly graduated; the outer movements flow from one mood to another with consummate good taste and passionate depth of feeling. You can almost feel the sunshine warming the febrile opening, and the soft caress of the finale.'
